

Tokyo Planning Forum and AIA Japan Presents:

Stanley Saitowitz

'Expanded Architecture - Buildings and Projects'

Professor of Architecture at the University of California, Berkeley, and Principal of Natoma Architects Inc. in San Francisco, Stanley Saitowitz will present his ideas and most recent projects that span all across the U.S.A.

Born in Johannesburg, South Africa, Stanley Saitowitz began his practice there in 1975, before moving to San Francisco in 1977. He celebrates his 30th year as a modernist practicing out of his South-of-Market Live/Work loft (a San Francisco building typology he has literally re-invented over the years), and currently works on numerous widely published projects in multi-family residences, institutional and religious buildings, including the newly commissioned Tampa Museum of Art.

His awards include The American Institute of Architects 1998 Henry Bacon Medal for Memorial Architecture, and the Boston Society of Architects 1997 Harleston Parker Award, the 2003 AIA San Francisco Design Award, Best of the Bay, for Yerba Buena Lofts, the 2004 AIA San Francisco Design Award, Best of the Bay for the Lief Residence, the 2005 AIA San Francisco Best of the Bay for Unbuilt Projects for Beth Shalom, the 2006 AIA San Francisco Best of the Bay for UCSF Mission Bay 23B Building, the Shaw Residence and Unbuilt Projects for First United Methodist Tower. The Transvaal House was declared a National Monument by the National Monuments Council of South Africa in 1997.

Picture: Yerba Buena Lofts, San Francisco

Wednesday, August 29, 2007 19:00 Azabu Hall #317, Temple University Japan